As of January 2026, concerns regarding a potential shift toward a "dictatorship" under Donald Trump focus on the erosion of democratic norms and the consolidation of executive power rather than a formal change to the U.S. Constitution. Critics and scholars point to several factors they believe are moving the U.S. toward "competitive authoritarianism," while supporters argue these actions are a legitimate use of presidential authority.

Current Indicators of Authoritarian Shifts (January 2026)

Consolidation of Power: The administration has worked to dismantle "guardrails" by firing inspectors general and sidelining the Department of Justice's Office of Legal Counsel to reduce internal checks on executive behavior.

Military and Domestic Force: In early 2026, the administration has been criticized for using the military as a "domestic political tool," exemplified by a "virtual siege" of Minneapolis and the use of ICE raids that some civil rights groups describe as unjustified.

Unilateral Action: The president has taken historic unilateral steps, such as withdrawing the U.S. from the U.N. Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and 66 other international organizations without congressional approval.

Weaponization of Government: The Department of Justice has reportedly been used to investigate perceived political enemies, news outlets, and donors to the Democratic Party.

Implementation of Project 2025: Analysis shows that many of the administration's executive actions "mirror or partially mirror" the Project 2025 blueprint for radical restructuring of the federal government.

Countervailing Forces and Safeguards

Democratic Resistance: Opposition forces are actively contesting these moves through litigation, community organizing, and preparations for the 2026 midterm elections, which are viewed as a critical opportunity to restore balance.

Judicial Oversight: While some experts worry the current Supreme Court is increasingly deferential to the executive, a wave of litigation from state governments and civil rights organizations continues to challenge the legality of executive orders.

Societal Polarization: The lack of "overwhelming majority support" for such a transition makes it difficult for the administration to establish a stable autocratic regime, as significant portions of the population remain in active opposition.

While experts like those at Scientific American warn that the U.S. is "heading toward a dictatorship," others argue that the country's decentralized power structure and the ability of citizens to contest power mean the prospects for maintaining democratic rule remain viable.

Psychiatrist, author and former member of parliament and minister Claes Andersson says he stands by his statement in the Elders' Council on Yle Vega on Monday. Donald Trump suffers from a personality disorder, he says. The fact that Claes Andersson is now expressing his opinion is because he is a specialist in psychiatry by training. He has worked in psychiatry for over 30 years, including as a chief physician in Ekenäs, at Hesperia Hospital in Helsinki and at Veikkola Sanatorium. He has treated many narcissists and psychopaths during his active career as a doctor, and has his experience to rely on.

- Narcissistic psychopaths are by no means uncommon, he says. What is a narcissist then? A narcissist is self-absorbed, and lacks the ability to empathize with others. He lacks the ability to empathize. Therefore, he does not take responsibility or feel guilty for anything, Andersson explains, adding that despite this, the narcissist is often both charismatic and seductive.

And he maintains that when it comes to Trump, the case is rarely clear. He says he can make this diagnosis remotely, because the symptoms are so clear. And Trump has offered them himself - in everything he has said to cheering crowds and in TV speeches.
And on Twitter.

Narcissistic personality disorder (NPD) is a personality disorder characterized by a life-long pattern of exaggerated feelings of self-importance, an excessive need for admiration, and a diminished ability to empathize with other people's feelings. Narcissistic personality disorder is one of the sub-types of the broader category known as personality disorders.

What Happens if the President Issues a Potentially Illegal Order to the Military?

What Happens if the President Issues a Potentially Illegal Order to the Military?

Uniformed commanders themselves have a specific obligation to reject an order that's unlawful, if they make that determination.

All military members swear to "preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic." Within that oath is the implication that service members hold allegiance to the rule of law.

The oath of enlistment goes on to ask service members to follow orders, but adds that it must be done "according to regulations and the Uniform Code of Military Justice," or UCMJ. Both Article 90 of the UCMJ, the charge of willfully disobeying a superior commissioned officer, and Article 92, failure to obey an order, say that they apply only to lawful orders.

During a March 2023 rally in Iowa, Trump suggested that he would use federal troops in cities like New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, which he argued have become crime dens.

"It is critical that the Insurrection Act specify what actions are permitted and what actions are prohibited, lest it become a vehicle for presidents to assert unlimited authority backed by military force." If an order is deemed lawful, a military commander who still has objections has little recourse but either to appeal to some higher echelon, carry out the order, or resign rennan Center wrote in a 2023 legal journal article.

You are not required to follow an unlawful order.

That would be in violation of all the international laws of armed conflict.

As the Trump administration carries out what many observers say are illegal military strikes against vessels in the Caribbean allegedly smuggling drugs, six Democratic members of Congress issued a video on Nov. 18, 2025, telling the military "You can refuse illegal orders" and "You must refuse illegal orders." Since Trump returned to office, many of his actions have alarmed international human rights observers. His administration has deported immigrants without due process, held detainees in inhumane conditions, threatened the forcible removal of Palestinians from the Gaza Strip and deployed both the National Guard and federal military troops to Los Angeles, Portland, Oregon, Chicago and other cities to quell largely peaceful protests or enforce immigration laws. Justice and the U.S. Manual for Courts-Martial, service members must obey lawful orders and disobey unlawful orders. Unlawful orders are those that clearly violate the U.S. Constitution, international human rights standards or the Geneva Conventions. Service members who follow an illegal order can be held liable and court-martialed or subject to prosecution by international tribunals. Following orders from a superior is no defense. Disturbing answers to soldiers: When asked if they would follow an order to drop a nuclear bomb on a civilian city, for example, 69% of troops who received that question first said they would obey the order. But when the respondents were asked to think about and comment on the duty to disobey unlawful orders before being asked if they would follow the order to bomb, the percentage who would obey the order dropped 13 points to 56%.

All army officers, those who command the regular troops, take and oath of allegiance to the CONSTITUTION, and NOT to whoever the current POTUS is. The POTUS is Commander-in Chief, meaning that he/she will have the final say over military policy, but the army does NOT have to obey his/her orders if they violate the law. One of the characteristics of Fascism is where the army serves a specific leader. In Weimar Germany, the individual army officers and troops took an oath to serve the German constitution. Adolf Hitler changed this early in his reign to have all new officers and troops take an oath to serve HIM.

"It doesn't cost 60,000 bucks to bury a fucking Mexican!"
He turned to his chief of staff, Mark Meadows, and issued an order: "Don't pay it!" Later that day, he was still agitated. "Can you believe it?" he said, according to a witness. "Fucking people, trying to rip me off."
The law generally prevents the president from using the military as a domestic police force.

The law generally prevents the president from using the military as a domestic police force.

The Posse Comitatus Act bars federal troops from participating in civilian law enforcement except when expressly authorized by law. This 143-year-old law embodies an American tradition that sees military interference in civilian affairs as a threat to both democracy and personal liberty. However, recent events have revealed dangerous gaps in the law's coverage that Congress must address.

In practice, this means that members of the military who are subject to the law may not participate in civilian law enforcement unless doing so is expressly authorized by a statute or the Constitution.

A desire to force U.S. military leaders to be obedient to him and not the Constitution is one of the constant themes of Trump's military-related discourse. Former officials have also cited other recurring themes: his denigration of military service, his ignorance of the provisions of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, his admiration for brutality and anti-democratic norms of behavior, and his contempt for wounded veterans and for soldiers who fell in battle.

In their book, The Divider: Trump in the White House, Peter Baker and Susan Glasser reported that Trump asked John Kelly, his chief of staff at the time, "Why can't you be like the German generals?" Trump, at various points, had grown frustrated with military officials he deemed disloyal and disobedient.

On January 6, 2021, the United States Capitol in Washington, D.C., was attacked by a mob of supporters of President Donald Trump in an attempted self-coup, two months after his defeat in the 2020 presidential election. They sought to keep him in power by preventing a joint session of Congress from counting the Electoral College votes to formalize the victory of then president-elect Joe Biden. The attack was unsuccessful in preventing the certification of the election results. According to the bipartisan House select committee that investigated the incident, the attack was the culmination of a plan by Trump to overturn the election. five people died: one was shot by the Capitol Police, another died of a drug overdose, and three died of natural causes, including a police officer who died of a stroke a day after.

George Washington saw Donald Trump coming. In a letter to General Lafayette in June 1787, 238 years ago, Washington warned of "some aspiring demagogue who will not consult the interest of his country so much as his own ambitious view." Washington saw this risk as central to America's future as an organized democracy. In his "Farewell Address" of 1796, the first president predicted that feverish parties "are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

Washington fortsatte: "The disorders and miseries which results gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual, and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns his disposition to the purposes of his own elevation on the ruins of public liberty."

How to remove Adolf Hitler 1933

When Hitler came to power legally through the 1932 election victory and in 1933 illegally staged a coup d'état and established a dictatorship, military intervention would have been required to remove him from power. That was the only chance. It was not taken. So why does anyone think that it is not needed for a would-be dictator in the United States?

Who trust Donald Trump

U.S. President Donald Trump receives mostly negative ratings in a new Pew Research Center survey of 24 nations. More than half in 19 of these countries say they lack confidence in Trump's leadership of world affairs.

Majorities in most countries also express little or no confidence in Trump's ability to handle specific issues, including immigration, the Russia-Ukraine war, U.S.-China relations, global economic problems, conflicts between Israel and its neighbors, and climate change.

When asked about Trump's personal characteristics, most describe him as arrogant and dangerous, while relatively few see him as honest. Still, majorities in 18 countries consider Trump a strong leader.

In most nations, views about Trump differ sharply along ideological and partisan lines. People who place themselves on the right and those who have favorable views of right-wing populist parties in Europe tend to view Trump more favorably.

Overall ratings of the United States have declined in 15 nations since last spring, including drops of 20 percentage points or more in Mexico, Sweden, Poland and Canada.

The U.S. receives its least positive assessment in Sweden, where 79% have a negative opinion of the country.

The Adolf - Plan

Under the United States Constitution, the House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachments while the Senate has the sole power to try impeachments (i.e., to acquit or convict); the validity of an impeachment trial is a political question that is nonjusticiable (i.e., is not reviewable by the courts). In the United States, impeachment is a remedial rather than penal process, intended to "effectively 'maintain constitutional government' by removing individuals unfit for office"; persons subject to impeachment and removal remain "liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.

The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two-thirds of the Members present. Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States; but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.

The federal House of Representatives can impeach a party with a simple majority of the House members present or such other criteria as the House adopts in accordance with Article One, Section 2, Clause 5 of the United States Constitution.

There are no advantages to introducing a Dictatorship in a country

A dictatorship, where a single person or a small group of people have all the power, has several disadvantages, including limited political freedom and participation, suppression of freedom of expression, human rights violations, and an increased risk of war.

Disadvantages of dictatorship:

Limited political freedom: Citizens have limited or no ability to influence political decisions, and opposition parties may be banned or severely restricted.

Suppression of freedom of expression: Censorship and restrictions on press freedom are common.

Human rights violations: Dictatorships often prioritize the interests of the state over those of the individual, leading to human rights violations.

Increased risk of war: Dictatorships may be more likely to go to war than democracies.

Less economic development: Dictatorships may have poorer economic development than democracies.

Risk of corruption: Dictatorships may have higher levels of corruption.

Risk of personality cult: Dictators may use their power to create a personality cult.

Lack of political diversity: Restrictions on political participation and freedom of expression can hinder the development of society and prevent diverse interests from being represented.

Risk of violence and persecution: Citizens may fear being subjected to violence or persecution because of their opinions or identity.

Lack of accountability: Dictators are not accountable to the people.

To mark the first 100 days of US President Donald Trump's second term, Human Rights Watch has catalogued 100 of the administration's executive policies, orders, and actions that pose significant risks to the human rights of people in the United States and around the world. The extent and long-term impact of these policies and actions is not known. Many of these rightsabusive policies are moving ahead; many are also facing court challenges brought by those affected, and their outcome may take months or years to resolve. In many instances, ordinary people in the United States and abroad are publicly demonstrating against the measures. This list of 100 harms is not comprehensive. Instead, it seeks to illustrate the sheer breadth of the human rights implications of the administration's actions during its first 100 days.

The project recommends the arrest, detention, and mass deportation of illegal immigrants, and deploying the U.S. Armed Forces for domestic law enforcement and removing legal protections against anti-LGBT discrimination. criminalizing those who send and receive abortion and birth control medications and eliminating coverage of emergency contraception.

Every individual has the right to make informed decisions about their own body and health, including the right to decide whether or when to become pregnant. Abortion is part of sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR) and is a human right. It is only when women, who make up about half of the world's population, have autonomy over their bodies that we can achieve gender equality and equitable and sustainable development in the world. Developments are generally moving forward despite the setbacks. Reports show that abortion is fully or partially legal in almost half of the 147 UN member states. This means that it is legal in an increasing number of countries. A step in the right direction.

Other agencies, including the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the Department of Education (ED), would be dismantled or abolished. It calls for reducing environmental regulations to favor fossil fuels and proposes making the National Institutes of Health (NIH) less independent while defunding its stem cell research. The blueprint seeks to reduce taxes on corporations, institute a flat income tax on individuals, cut Medicare and Medicaid. Stephen Skowronek, John A. Dearborn, and Desmond King argue that the unitary executive theory would cause disruption, creating a 'constitutional nightmare' by concentrating executive power in a way that the founders hoped to avoid.
